

ABSTRACT

An optical routing system is disclosed. The optical routing system includes a substrate and at least one optical element embedded within the substrate which is configured to route optical signals. In a preferred embodiment, the optical element is a microsphere with a surface
5 reflecting means. The optical element is configurable in any of six orthogonal directions to enable the routing of optical signals.